SILT, Colo (KKCO) It happened Saturday morning around 6:45 am. Officials say the breach caused the produced water to flow into Dry Hollow Creek, but didn't reach the Colorado river. There was no impact on the surface water, and minimal environmental impact. Officials say the spill was cleaned up by 11 am. No word yet on the cause of the breach. Due to the size of the spill, the incident was reported to the Colorado Oil and Gas Conservation Commission, and the Colorado Health Department. It's unknown if the agencies will take further action at this time.
