

Photo 1. View of diffuse knapweed (Centaurea diffusa) plant growing along the flowline right of way.

Photo 2. View of several diffuse knapweed plants growing along the flowline right of way.

Photo 3. View of diffuse knapweed stem with a flower bud forming at the apex.

Photo 4. View of Scotch thistle (Onopordum acanthium; on left) and Canada thistle (Cirsium arvense; on right) along the flowline right of way.

Photo 5. View of erosional channel forming within southern portion of well pad within the interim reclamation area facing southeastward.

Photo 6. View of western portion of well pad from southwestern corner facing northward. Revegetation species in this area are crested wheatgrass (Agropyron cristatum), New Mexico needlegrass (Hesperostipa neomexicana), and western wheatgrass (Pascopyron smithii).

Photo 7. View of southern portion of project area from southwestern corner facing eastward. Crested wheatgrass is the dominant grass in the foreground.